Beginning October 2016, ICA Miami's new Art + Research Center will mount month-long workshops and related public programs in collaboration with Florida International University

Applications now open; enrollment is free and open to the public

September 19, 2016 – (Miami, FL) – The Institute of Contemporary Art, Miami (ICA Miami) announced today the launch of its Art + Research Center (A+RC), the museum's new research department and educational initiative dedicated to exploring topical social and environmental issues in relation to contemporary art. The A+RC's program will feature application-based, graduate-level workshops and public presentations by leading thinkers and theorists in the humanities and social sciences, exploring themes such as climate change and social justice that impact the conditions from which contemporary art emerges.

Developed by ICA Miami's Curator of Programs, Gean Moreno, the Art + Research Center is the first museum-based research department in South Florida focused on theoretical inquiry. A major component of the A+RC will be the production of print publications and e-books that expand the reach of its programmatic activities and provide a new open source for freely distributed research materials in our region. Mounted in collaboration with Florida International University's MFA Visual Art program, the A+RC's field-advancing curricula will include a calendar of lectures, programs, and symposia geared towards fostering robust dialogue with the general public and lifelong learners.

"The Art + Research Center will make an immediate impact on the community of cultural producers in Miami, and greatly enhances ICA Miami's mission to build visual literacy and develop rigorous scholarship in our community," said Ellen Salpeter, ICA Miami Director. "The Center is indicative of a number of new ideas that the museum is developing as we begin to transition into our new permanent home late next year."

For the pilot semester beginning October 3, and its theme of "New Social Abstractions," leading artists-theorists Hito Steyerl, Simon Denny, Evan Calder Williams, and writer Ana Teixeira Pinto will lead an exploration into new levels of complexity that organize our modern world and discuss new kinds of artistic production that this development may demand.

Art + Research Center 2016 Pilot Semester Schedule of Events

New Social Abstractions (October 3 – 27, 2016)

Whether it is a finance economy that relies on complex projections and infinitesimal shifts, or infrastructures and corporations that blur national and hemispheric borders, today's world functions at levels of complexity that defy straightforward examination. Current social abstractions provoke new ways of understanding and describing our world and our culture. ICA Miami's A+RC pilot semester will address how contemporary art production might contend with a world defined by ever-changing abstraction.
